

Concentration of media ownership is one of the greatest dangers facing our democracy. The largest media companies have exaggerated influence over the information available to voters, and this favors the owner, the advertisers, and those with the resources to sway them. Freedom of speech is an empty phrase if the megaphones are controlled by those with the power to buy them. Please protect real freedom of expression by preventing newspapers and TV stations from becoming nothing more than multiple strategies of a the same set of speakers.
